Zurich, Switzerland – SAGE and SIX Telekurs have announced their collaboration agreement having completed the integration of SIX Telekurs' real-time quotes into SAGE's banking system, Prospero. Prospero is a real-time desktop terminal targeted at Relationship Managers and traders. Prospero's trading platform provides traders, relationship managers and clients with an accurate view of market fluctuations in real-time. SIX Telekurs is hereby extending its comprehensive global data offering by teaming up with expert partners to offer clients value-added solutions.

"This new partnership has been developed in response to market requirements from existing and prospective customers. It adds greater functionality to Prospero's flexible, cost-effective, and customizable Order Management System" says Patrick Rotzetter, Head of Business Development at SAGE.

The combination of SIX Telekurs' comprehensive global real-time market data offering and Prospero's powerful analytical and trading tools provides portfolio managers, investment advisors and wealth managers with up-to-the-second access to significant information", says Paul Bollhalder, Managing Director of SIX Telekurs Asia Pacific, excluding Japan.

Prospero's runs on state-of-the-art technology and its integration with SIX Telekurs adds tremendous value to clients. It reduces risk, thanks to real-time market information, and it is a one-stop shop for traders and client-facing professionals. Its streaming capabilities are accessible from Web browsers, providing users with the flexibility to trade and run queries regardless of their location.
