Media Release no. 03/07

Frankfurt/Main - Telekurs Financial has gained further customers in the field of web-based financial applications. These now also include the "db-markets" capital market portal, the derivatives websites of Dresdner Kleinwort and the internet portal of the news channel n-tv.

Deutsche Bank AG has revamped the www.db-markets.com capital market portal it operates for corporate clients. The revised online offering for professional customers – designed and implemented jointly by Telekurs Financial and Deutsche Bank's software partner – comprises of global financial information from Telekurs Financial such as equity prices, business news and data required for interest rate and currency management purposes. Telekurs Financial has successfully operated the global certificates platform x-markets (www.x-markets.db.com) for Deutsche Bank since the beginning of 2005.

Dresdner Kleinwort, the investment bank of Dresdner Bank AG, has also unveiled a new derivatives website created by Telekurs Financial. Private investors and financial consultants can now visit at www.zertifikate.dresdner.com to obtain information on certificates, warrants and other specialised products provided by the investment bank. Superior data quality and the integration of modern tools prompted Dresdner to choose Telekurs Financial.

The German news and business broadcaster n-tv has expanded its web-based range of information on the economy and markets through the inclusion of new financial tools and even more comprehensive stock market data. At www.n-tv.de/boerse, visitors to the portal have free access to quotes as well as to lists of winners/losers and business news items. The financial information on this site is supplied by Telekurs Financial.
